

Each homeroom in the Lower School acted as a band, working together on projects that produced knowledge by way of discovery, friendships, and increasing interests. Learning together gave each child a chance to add to his own creativity which would later develop completely. With the aid of teachers, new ideas were inspired and put to use in activities in which the class participated fully.

