

The voices of WDOG, Bonnie McLaughlin, Judy Foley, and Gary Schulman, narrate the play-by-play action.

The "little people" dance is performed gingerly by Coaches Starks and Thomas.

In a "commercial", Elaine Proctor and Holly McCord "cream" Mike Duck.

Pep Rallies Boost Spirit

Imaginative skits highlighted this year's pep rallies. Through the cooperative efforts of many different people, skits became a feature of the enthusiastic rallies held Friday afternoon of the home games. These skits, combined with an exciting cheerleading squad, a spirited football team, and a rousing band, made the gym walls shake with laughter and vibrate as the crowd roared.

Former homecoming pep rallies have included football games staged by the cheerleaders, but this year's version was far superior to past efforts. Commercials between plays presented new products such as "Pit Juice" deodorant and a spicy sample of Gator-Ade. Mike Duck had a close shave at the hands of volunteers Elaine Proctor and Holly McCord in another commercial.

Football coaches Kaznoski, Starks, Simmons, Haynesworth, and Thomas played cheerleaders and showed us a far-out version of "HELLO". At half-time the coaches returned, disguised as "little people" and danced to music provided by the band.

The most spectacular moment came when Mr. Pendergrass, Mr. Farr and Mr. Lewis made their grand entrance as the pep rally homecoming queen contestants.

Pep rally skits were frequently brainstormed during Broadcasting Club meetings. "The New Price Is Wrong" and the "Basketball Jones" skits were planned and enacted by the radio club members.
