Four young juniors made up the 1973 Golf team. Listed in order of player rank were: Carrol Hoats, Bob Burch, Eddie Dukes, and Ronald Kubik. The '73 season was a successful year for the Bulldog golfers. New eligibility rules presented themselves as problems for the young golfers at the very outset of the season, but all problems were soon quelled as the golfers got down to serious play. Playing a ten-match schedule the dogs placed first in five and drew ties in several others. At last year's Athletic Awards Banquet, Bob Burch was presented the trophy for Most Valuable Golfer.

The '73 Bulldog baseball players were rewarded with an 11-7 season. Strong hitters and a good battery were responsible for the Bulldog's success. Coach Fred Bradley had greeted many young hopefuls in January and they soon got down to work. Long practices resulted in an outstanding season for several individuals. First-baseman Jackie Ramsey captured All-Conference honors as he led the Bulldogs batters with a .325 average. The '73 season also saw pitcher Herbert Mixon set a school record as he retired 18 batters in a seven inning game. Rounding out the infield were Melvin Williamson (2nd), Lynn Smith (SS), Nick Pinckney (3rd) and Don Crosby, played an outstanding season as catcher. Leading outfielders included Robbie Robertson, Casey Price, and Mark Herrin. The '74 season will see the same faces as a young squad returns in pursuit of an outstanding season.
