

Vocational Students Prepare For the Future

After traveling to the Colleton County Vocational School, students from Walterboro High School and Ruffin High School spent three hours a day studying in their chosen fields. Seniors anxiously awaited the bus which left at 8:45 every morning; juniors went at 12:00.

The classes offered at the school are there to teach the students a trade or business skill so they will be prepared for their future lives. Some classes offered were Food Service, and Clerical Shorthand, and Typing, which helped prepare the student for a future in office work. Electricity, Welding, Auto Mechanics and Carpentry were offered for the students who planned to take up a trade.
