

"What's Apathy?" "I Don't Care."

It became clear as the yearbook took shape that apathy was a major problem for both campuses that formed our school. The same people appeared again and again.

The division of the school between two campuses and promotion of Colleton High as a separate entity created feelings of separateness which had devastating effects on the schools' programs.

Academically the schools were forced to duplicate equipment and materials. As a result students got less of everything. Students were limited in the courses they could take as some were offered on one campus and not the other. Only the one or two willing to fight mountains of red tape and provide their own transportation got a course offered at the other campus.

Typing classes at Colleton were held only a few periods a day. At WHS they were packed and students were turned away. The reverse was true for PE classes.

Clubs were dropped because not enough students at one school were interested in them. Other clubs or organizations had to be dropped because the faculty member interested in sponsoring it was at the other school.

With so many obstacles most students just gave up and did not participate in any activity. Those prevented from taking classes they wanted went unwillingly to what was offered. Only the very few who pushed and pulled until they got what they wanted did not succumb to the situation. A few were not apathetic. They appeared most frequently in this yearbook.

Christopher Lake
Mary Langdale
Linda Lawton

Dianne Lemacks
Faye Lemacks
Herman Levant

Anthony Lloyd
Dwayne Lyons
Betty Manigo

Glenda Manigo
John Manigo
Thomas Manigo

Cheryl Maree
Earnestine Martin
Willie Martin

Woodrow Martin
David Mays
Tommy Mays

Sharia Mae McCollum
Timmy Ray McCollum
Palmer McDurfee
Robert McFadden
James McKay
Carolyn McPherson

Harry McPherson
Marie McPherson
Mary Ellen McQuine
Wayne Memminger
Rebecca Middleton
Glenn Mikel

