October 14, 1975 was no ordinary day. The Bulldogs were to play the Berkley Stags in celebration of Homecoming that night and excitement was felt throughout the entire day.

Cheerleaders started the day's activities by selling special ribbons, shakers and pennants. At lunch several of the football players, as well as many students created a "pep train". They marched up and down the halls singing and cheering.

The height of the school day, however, came at the end of sixth period in the form of a pep rally. Students gathered in the gym to watch the skits, listen to the band, and cheer along with the cheerleaders.

The highlight of the evening was, of course, the game between the Mighty Bulldogs and the Stags. The Bulldogs, naturally, would not disappoint their fans and won the game with a final score of 13 to 17.
