

Travis Lights and Mike Hall synchronize the clocks.

Victor, Louvenis and Billy check over the final tally after the last election.

CLASSES

If you're happy of course you smile. Often you wondered what there was to smile about. Stop and think; there were small events to celebrate and shout about and those should have brought a smile to your face or maybe even a grin.

This year students weren't faced with the inconvenience of reporting to homeroom every morning. It was really aggravating having to come to school just for homeroom if you didn't have first period class. If you were lucky enough to have a third period study hall you got a head start on every one else by being first in the lunch line.

What else was there for students to celebrate or smile about? Those crafty enough managed to trick the guidance counselors into letting them schedule work instead of classes during fifth and sixth periods, and then since they couldn't find a job, they had those two hours to walk the halls. One student was grateful to the computer for giving him four study halls.

There were other little events worthy of celebrating; Whenever that sickening teacher was absent, and lovable Mrs. Shook replaced her, the day when the bells rang completely off schedule, getting out of school early for the Christmas parade and remember all those activities that caused your classes to be interrupted or even missed!

I bet you can't tell I like smiling for Cameras!