

People

An amazingly large portion of our lives is spent inside a school building. We learn, eat lunch, waste time, and have fun during the course of each school day. The school environment becomes a total learning experience: we learn to accept the demands placed upon us by teachers and friends; we learn that there is never enough time to do the things we really want; and we learn that friends are sometimes easy to make but hard to keep.