Thank Goodness it's Friday Night

When asked what she thought about Friday night's, Mellissa Ammon replied, "It's Friday night and I'm feeling right, friends are all I need tonight!" Her friends quickly seconded that motion.

Whether Friday night plans included parties, mall moods, or cruising with friends, they were always anxiously anticipated.

On a Friday night around eight o'clock, Jeffries Boulevard was bright with neon signs, headlights, and friendly faces. Some students chose to date while others kept things casual and just met friends uptown. But whatever the case, Walterboro High's students thought Friday Nights were a first class time.

Partying with friends are Tami Crosby and Randy Caldwell.
