

Romance

When looking in Webster's dictionary, romance was defined as "an emotional attraction." Though technically that may be true, high school students thought of romance as being something different.

Love was youthful; love was pure and honest. It involved feelings of affection for another human being. Feelings which were enduring, like living in a fairy tale world of love and adventure.

Romance has been called the spice of life; the one thing that made each day more worthwhile. Romance was what it was, and always will be.
