Letters . . .

were worth the effort.

One of the most important moments in the life of a high school athlete was the day he received his letter. A letter was the reward for athletes who excelled in their particular sport. It sets you apart from the crowd and makes you somebody.

Earning a letter was more difficult in some sports than it was in others. Some sports required a certain amount of playing time while in other sports, just making the team qualified you for a letter. Making the team, however, wasn't always that easy.

The letter, a big W, was the same for all sports. Each sport was represented by a pin which was worn attached to the letter. The promise of a letter was an inspiration to many young athletes to strive to be their best.

Wearing his letter jacket is Ronnie Colson.
