

Super Seniors

Leaving their mark

Winning awards, breaking records, being chosen for a certain group or just trying were things done by students. But during that last year, seniors tried to think of a way to leave their mark. In some form or another, many of them did.

Leading the school in the sports arena were Jeff Caldwell, Ronnie Colson, Tony Stephens, Kevin Whitaker, Bruce Williams, and Willie Frasier. All were either elected to play on state conference teams or broke state and school track records.

Excelling in the business world were Phyllis Walling and William Risher. William was chosen to represent the state as Mr. DECA and Phyllis won the U.S. Achievement Academy Accounting Award.

Whether it was singing or playing an instrument, people excelled in all areas of music. Besides being a Furman Scholar and Girls State Representative, Elizabeth Belcher was chosen to sing in the Honors-All-State chorus concert. Receiving the coveted John Phillips Sousa Award was Band of Blue member Dan Bodison.

Competing in tests became very important to students. Melissa Brown and Monique Tracy were selected as National Negro Achievement Scholarship Finalists.

Student leadership was also a large part of the school system. Besides being a member of the National Honor Society, Student Council president William Reynolds made sure students had a voice in school procedures. Also Jerri-Ann Blakeman was chosen as Miss DAR on the basis of character, service, and leadership abilities.

So whether it was in a big or small way, most seniors will be remembered by teachers, other students and administrators because of the way they "left their mark."

Mr. DECA, William Risher, was chosen on the basis of his business abilities.
