

Shannon Martin and Andy Harrison converse at the reception held for the Bulldogs before the State game.

Anticipating State . . .

Anticipation; It's worth the wait!

Spirit was the word to describe the pep rallies and other activities that involved the student body. Not only were the students involved but also the faculty and administration. Mr. Jarvis made the pep rallies much more interesting. Mrs. Rhode was always there when someone needed an encouraging word to make them feel sure about the upcoming game. Mr. Jones kept his promise by doing a push-up for every point the football team scored the previous week.

The Spirit Club was given a lot of recognition for helping with the activities that got people into the spirit. Spirit Club members hung various signs around the school to help boost the moral of the victorious Bulldogs.

Every Friday morning students bombarded the central office to get a Bulldog paw on their face. Some students even went to the extent of getting their entire face painted half blue and half white.

Spirit proved to be the key that made the football season so successful. Even the Bulldogs, themselves agreed. Wylie Ellis, linebacker, said, "The pep rallies will always be remembered with fondness because everyone seemed to have a sense of pride for our school."

The Bulldogs pulled through and proved that they were the best.

In the midst of a spirited pep rally, Mr. Jones, keeping his promise to match the football team's score with push-ups, demonstrates his strength

Sonya Fryar is seen in the central office getting a paw before the game.