

Thank Goodness It's The Weekend

We've waited so long

For most students weekends weren't the end of the week, but the beginning! As soon as the 3:00 bell rang on Friday afternoon the partying began.

A common sight on Friday night was students cruising town. Down Jefferies, around Sonic, up Main Street and by Wizard World were popular routes. Sharon Howell said, "I usually go uptown but sometimes I stay home to rest."

A lot of students found that the best place to be was sitting home watching cable television. For students who dated, they normally went out to eat and to a movie. Alma Koger replied, "I go to the movies every Saturday night."

Parties were routine on the weekend. It was very unlikely for a weekend to go by without a party. Among other things students really enjoyed getting together and dancing.

Shopping was a very popular activity on the weekend. Students often got together and went to the mall. Every now and then some strolled down Market Street not leaving before stopping at Swenson's Ice Cream Parlor for an "earthquake," a humongous bowl of eight flavors of ice cream and many different toppings. An "earthquake" certainly brought friends closer.

In warmer weather, students gathered at Edisto Beach, a popular "hangout" place for teenagers. They came down to meet new people and get terrific tans.

Unfortunately, weekends came to a close much to fast and students never got to rest as they had planned. No matter how students spent their weekends, they definitely enjoyed them.

Cruising around town with chauffeur Brain Platt are Lisa Rogers, Martha Ross, and Susie Smith.
