

Hands-On Experience

"When you leave the Colleton Area Vocational Center, you have a skill that will stay with you." That was what Marchel Williams, a stenography student, had to say about the center.

Offering courses in business, auto mechanics, masonry, carpentry, welding, and food services, the vocational center had something for everyone. Students traveled there for either the first or last three periods of the day.

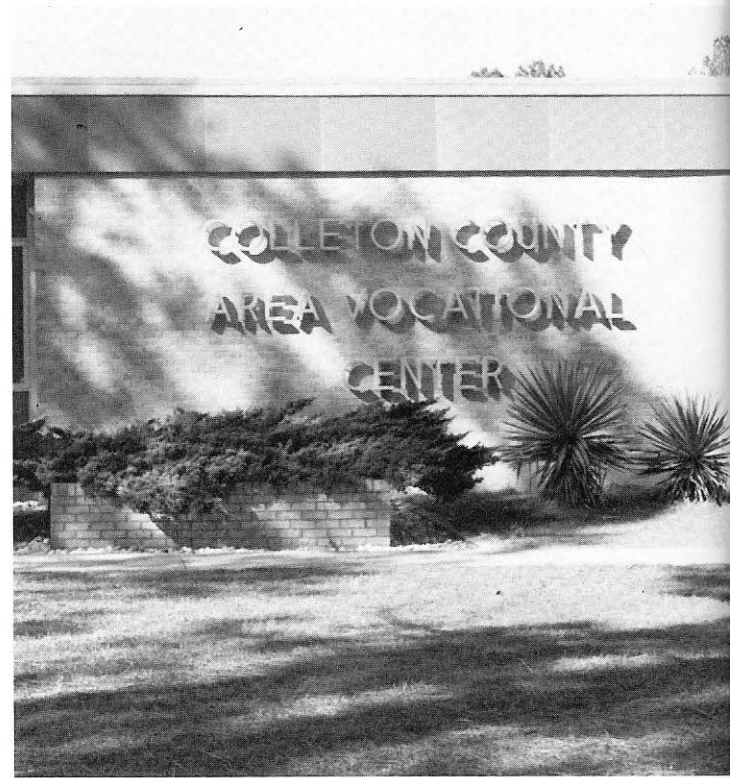

Just recently, five new IBM computers were installed. They were basically used in the stenographic and clerical classes.

Students in the masonry and carpentry classes displayed their projects during Vocational Educational Week. Other students were alerted to the great things that were happening at the vocational center. There students put down the books and learned from experience, hands-on experience.

---

Colleton County Area Vocational Center is where many students go to improve their vocational skills.

Working hard at constructing new restrooms for the Recreation Commission are Frankie Thompson, Robert Singleton and Hosea Green.

Charles Middleton shows off his ability with a saw.

