Being in High School

A lot of students had about the same idea of being in high school last year. Ronald Frazier, Baron Deloach and Tim Mabry had the same thing on their minds when asked about being in high school—"Girls!" Along the same lines, Paula Rahn energetically answered, "Boys!" Jennifer Guilford being a bit more specific, daringly said, "Gene." Woodie Nettles and Scott Riggins thought of athletics. Woodie said, "Tennis," and Scott said, "Football." Being a slight bit pessimistic, both Keith Crosby and Michael Harrison said, "Boring." But on the brighter side, Stacey Christianson said "Good times." Looking toward the future, Cathy Toomer said, "Graduation," with a gleam in her eye. These were the feelings of students and their first year of high school.

Big eyes and hands on pockets always give a new student away. These freshmen look a little wary of the Commons Area.
