Our Small Town Image is not Entirely Gone

Money, money, and more money! Money made the world go 'round and in this world sat the small metropolis of Walterboro. With expanding subdivisions, new shopping centers and restaurants, Walterboro began to join the ranks of the 'big cities' and lost its small town image. Though a small town image was lost, Walterboro's friendliness and closeness remained and the community prospered.

A Wendy's was built, a skating rink was planned and our beltline was finished. A traffic light was constructed at the highway 15 and Bulldog Avenue intersection. Unfortunately several accidents had occurred previously.

While Presidential primaries, a variety show, and the Rice Festival kept the community busy and involved, one thing highlighted the year for the town's people. The young and old alike traveled to Williams Brice Stadium in Columbia to support the football team that earned Our Stamp Of Approval.

Rainy weather and dark skies do not dampen the spirit of a balloon vendor at the annual Christmas parade.
