The Price of Being A senior

The price of being a senior was high—the hard work, long hours, numerous applications, aptitude tests, and shelled-out cash. A conservative estimate by the Paw Print staff came out to about five hundred dollars. There were expenses such as: prom tickets, $15; tuxedo, $50; dress, $100; and junior senior weekend, $50 to $60.

Unfortunately, not all of the five hundred dollars was spent on enjoyable endeavors like the prom. There was an average of thirty dollars spent on school fees; however, if you didn't return your library books when due, prices sky rocketed at a nickel a day! Hopefully, everyone bought a year-book at $15, took senior pictures for $80, bought a senior key for $20, and senior supplies at $50. Some people were very upset about the cancellation of the Senior trip, but after all the spending, who could have afforded it at a price of $73?

A major senior expense was senior pictures. Missy Ebarb, Issac Cochran, Timmy Grant, and Linda Middlebrook, take care of upperclassman business.
