

TURN IN THE RIGHT DIRECTION

What Clubs are All About ...

HAVING FUN, BUT PRODUCING

A school's purpose was not just to teach a student to study and attend class, it was also to produce a well-rounded student. A student became this way through extra-curricular activities. A large percentage of the student body belonged to a club, a main extra-curricular outlet.

Clubs ran on a regular schedule giving them a chance to plan and execute activities. Some of these activities were trips, speakers, and community activities. Clubs were also able to have fund raisers such as bake sales, car washes, doughnut sales, fruit sales, and many more.

One of the largest clubs, the Spirit Club, had a new advisor, Ms. Sandy Stearns. This club had meetings before the regular club schedule in order to prepare for football season. Members often stayed after school to make signs and plan spirit promoting sales.

The National Honor Society held its annual induction ceremony in February. Members of this club were nominated by the scholarship committee. These students were chosen based on their academic achievement and teacher references.

The History and Science clubs went on trips. The History club traveled to Biltmore House, a mansion owned by the Vanderbilts. The Science club held a Science Fair and planned trips for scientific purposes, while the Future Teachers of America club held its annual Easter egg hunt.

by Joan Johnson

Posing in front of the Biltmore House, some members of the History club take a break to have their picture taken. The History club traveled to North Carolina to view the famous mansion of the Vanderbilts.

National Honor Society new members, Christy Allen, Katrina Avant, Alejandro Barron, and Johnny Bell hold their candles ready to recite their pledge.