

Class Humor

During a hectic junior year, relief was needed from teachers and term papers. People like Marcus Townsend, Yolanda Pinckney, Micheal Fennessy, and Byron Miller provided a temporary break during these stressful times. Because of their unique ability to amuse their classmates, they were voted most humorous.

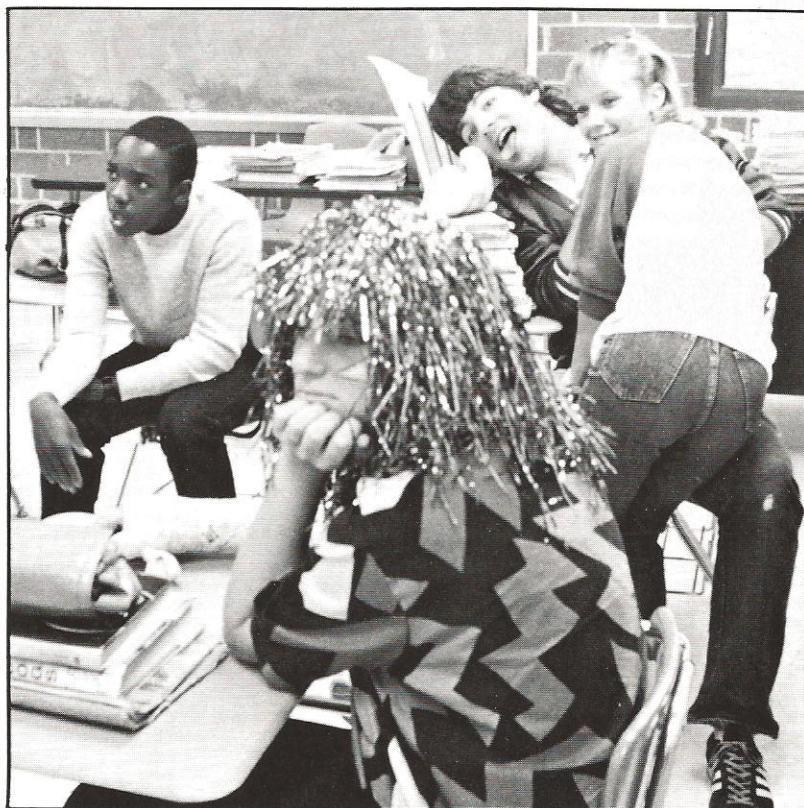

Yet not everyone found them amusing—such as the teachers. While many students laughed away the entire period, teachers ground their teeth and tried to maintain order. Mrs. Allen commented, “Sometimes students who try to amuse others find themselves sitting in the hall.”

When asked about her comical abilities, Yolanda Pinckney smirked, “I find great satisfaction in making others laugh. It makes me feel good and all those around me feel good.”

In general, students feel that teachers should relax a little and allow restless teenagers to have their fun. Byron Miller added, “It feels great to cut-up in class and making people laugh. Sometimes I end up making the teachers laugh too!”

by Shawna Davis

Donald Longnion tries desperately to attract the attention of his classmates.