

First Fears

Students experience new environment

Coming to a new school and meeting new teachers and students can be extremely frightening. Even so, the "first day jitters" could be cured through experience, and the freshman could settle into the routine.

When asked about their first fears, David Malphrus and Lisa McCall both replied that their biggest fear was "getting lost." Tonya Sams remarked about the size of the school. Leslie N. Williams stated, "You don't know if people will like you," while Tammy Brown agreed stating, "I was also worried if upperclassmen would like me." Erika Rochelle Wright had a different fear from that of her friends Leslie and Tammy. She expressed, "I was worried about trying to find my classes."

Whatever their fear, the freshmen seemed to settle into the routine and make friends with the upperclassmen.
