

Things Will Never Be the Same

The course of the year brought with it events that left lasting impressions. Hurricane Hugo, the San Francisco Earthquake, the invasion in Panama, and the fall of the Berlin Wall were happenings that the world will long remember.

The school term offered its share of changes, also. This graduating class was the first affected by the Exit Exam under the Education Improvement Act. As sophomores, students made their first attempt at passing the exam.

The graduation commencement traditionally marked the close of another year. Seniors left their alma mater with the experiences of the past four years as underclassmen ascended the ladder to the top.

Each student had bittersweet memories that brought laughter and tears, and this yearbook would provide a tangible reminder of the year where nothing was the same.

Papier-Maché Mania

Jamie Kaye smiles as he works on the papier-maché waterfall. It took one week for the prom committee to complete the decoration that enhanced the lobby.

The Crowning Glory

Miss America has nothing on Prom Queen Amy Easterlin as she smiles jubilantly as Principal Bob Pence crowns her. The Prom King was Joseph Pinckney.
