

SEIZE

T H E D A Y

As the school year drew to a close, each moment became more precious. The past nine months had flown by and students were caught up in May's whirlwind of activities. From the Rice Festival to the A.P. exams to the Prom to the many awards banquets, it seemed enough hours were not in each day.

To Seniors, the last thirty days seemed to be even more valuable. On June 6, they would graduate and leave one stage of life for another. Everything seemed to be moving so quickly. Each fleeting moment was more precious. They knew these last few days would be among the most memorable of their lives--days to make the most of.

Mary Bass

