

Paws & Reflect

Standing at the front doors of Walterboro High School, one may see many things. At first glance it may be parents waiting patiently in cars, students socializing happily with new-found friends, or maybe even football players hard at work on the practice field; but a closer look reveals the more hidden details. Waiting outside of WHS is and was nothing more than the future, but it was how the students molded it that made them who and what they are. Most students held the faces of starry-eyed dreamers as the onset of the Millenium created new fears and excitement that no one was prepared for.

The school year started with a bang... literally. Pipes on the Vocational Hall burst causing a hallway to flood and students to get a half day off on one of the first few days of school.

Hurricanes gave students relief throughout the first weeks of school creating many vacation days. The downside of the days off, unfortunately, was the make-up days.

Football players found their places under the lights, only "PAWS"ing to celebrate a glorious victory or even contemplate a heartbreaking loss. They struggled through a rough beginning, only to regain their fierce reputation with a winning record of 8-5.

For the Love of the Game. Sophomore football player Steven Pippin and Defensive Coordinator Coach Kenneth Schofield plot out their next play. Coach Schofield was known to have close relationships with many of the players.

Crowning Beauty. Homecoming Queen, La'shea Dubois tearfully accepts her crown and flowers from Principal Bob Pence. La'Shea had been a class beauty since her freshman year, so no one was surprised when she won.
