

FALL INTO FALL!

Leaving the Millennium Behind!

The Monster Mash...

Junior
Gina Girardeau and senior Jaclyn Grigg pose for a picture on Halloween night. "I had a blast with Gini! We made some fun memories that night!"
said Jaclyn.

Will Smith said it best, "It's not where you're at, it's where you're gon' be..." With friends and family, the students at Walterboro High School knew how to bring in the new millennium. Leading up to the heavily controversial new year was Halloween, Thanksgiving, and Christmas.

For Halloween, the usual ghouls and goblins were lurking around in scary attire. Some students attended a party at Jessica Mears' house. "I had a costume party at my house for Halloween. There were so many people there and it was all fun and games till the cops came!" exclaimed Jessica Mears.

Like numerous other students, Esther Adams spent Thanksgiving with her family, and of course, eating... a lot! She also watched the Macy's parade and a football game; two things that are associated with the Thanksgiving holiday.

Some students chose to travel over the holidays, like Meredith Dresher. Every other year she goes to Atlanta, Georgia to see her dad for Christmas. Justin Singleton remembered a funny Christmas. "My mom didn't put names on the presents one year. So my sister and I opened all the presents to see which presents were ours."

Students were finally able to "party like it's 1999" to end this year as well as the millennium. There was so much excitement surrounding the new year. Although a lot of people were uneasy about technology and the "Y2K crisis", they were not afraid of the world coming to an end or all the computers crashing by the end of the year. So what were the bulldogs doing when the ball dropped in Times Square? The cheerleaders were at the Sugar Bowl, while other students were at church, and some were with their friends at parties.

Of course there was the annual fireworks tradition and most students could have been found watching MTV when the ball dropped, or kissing a special someone when the clock struck twelve.

After all the ghouls and goblins had gone away, the turkey ham was eaten, and the presents were opened, the memories of 1999 would remain as the new ones of 2000 are made.

- Samantha Herndon

Beyond the workplace... Mrs. Marilyn Zielke, Ms. Julia Lindberg, Mrs. Julia Waddell, Mrs. Susan Nettles, Mrs. Jenny Jackson, Mrs. Michelle Westler, Mrs. Janice Blocker, and Mr. Roger Dixon gather together for a Christmas party at Mrs. Nettles' house.

Friends 'till the end! Juniors Wendy Varner and April Bullock, and sophomore Shera Brown pose for a picture at a New Year's party. The three could be caught together almost anywhere they went.