

Marching With Pride

NJROTC Follows Up With Another Good Year

Naval Junior Reserve Officer Training Corp began at Walterboro High School in 1993. Since then, "We have improved in the quality of cadets, and the cadets have taken more pride in school and in the community," said C.E. Armentrout.

NJROTC participates in seven different activities. These include: orienteering, academic team, rifle, unarmed drill, armed drill, athletic team, and color guard. The most interesting activity was orienteering. Orienteering taught how to use a compass and a map. When practicing, the cadets ran around the back of the track field, learning new techniques.

NJROTC proved to be a vital part of a cadet's life. In the classroom and in the community, NJROTC cadets gave 100% of their effort. The cadets were very involved in the activity and took it very serious. Freshman Kelly McIlwain said, "I have learned a great deal about places in the United States, leadership, and many interesting stories." NJROTC was a very good experience in the lives of all the cadets. They took pride in everything they did.

"Working hard takes a lot of time after school, and you have to be willing to go the extra mile," said Senior Commanding Officer Cameron Brown.

NJROTC had a great deal of responsibility, and every activity taken part in reflected on each individual's future. It made every cadet mature. "It gives you more leadership and experience," said senior Karen Ellett.

NJROTC was an organization designed to improve the academics and character of everyone.

-Shera Brown

"We have improved in the quality of cadets, and the cadets have taken more pride in school and in the community," said C.E. Armentrout.

The Inside Story---

