

STOP!!

That is SO annoying!!

"Oh my gosh, that get's on my nerves so bad." Everyday these words could be heard coming from students' mouths.

Pet Peeves were a huge part in everyday lives. Many pet peeves were common, such as swearing or chewing loudly. Other pet peeves such as sniffing, and loud laughter were huge annoyances for others.

"I strongly detest when people, espically friends, are two faced," said junior Fraysse Lyle.

It seemed that so many daily activities bothered so many people. "The most annoying thing that anyone could do is smack their food when they eat," said sophomore Ashley Pinckey.

Many people lived for pet peeves, because it gave them something to complain about. "I like having a pet peeve because it gives me something to focus my frustrations on," said sophomore Krystle Bishop.

Other pet peeves were more personal. "I really have a problem with people invading privacy and when other people do it just to get on my nerves," said senior Leah Elkins.

Everyone had their own complaints; however, getting past the pet peeves seemed to be a challenge for all to overcome.

-Erika Kizer

1 Smack Attack! Annoying things bother everyone and for freshman Hunter Thomas, smacking is the worst. Everyone should have known better than to smack their food.

2 I'm too sexy. Sophomore Brandon Johnson's biggest pet peeve is with people who he considers, full of themselves. It felt nice to have self-confidence, but that did not mean it should be taken to the extreme.

3 Get Away From Me. What bothers junior Angie Reeves is someone standing over her. Invading someone's area, a no-no, should always have been avoided, it made one seem rude.

