The National Honor Society played a major role in the lives of many students. Members spent many hours doing projects for their community. "To stay in NHS, I have to maintain a 3.7 GPA, have a clean discipline record, and complete at least forty hours of community service a year," said senior JD Neal.

Special events NHS participated in included Adopt-a-Highway, the Halloween carnival, the Asthma Fair, and put on a Powder Puff football game. "I was so excited about playing in the powder puff football game because this was my first year playing and I learned a lot about the game," said junior Ashley Ulmer.

The NHS meetings informed everyone in the club about their financial situations, accomplishments the others members made, and the members discussed vital information about the club. "All of the sponsors and club officers are really sweet and understanding. We have respect for each other, but we can also joke around during the meetings," said senior Sophia Barnes.

National Honor Society members took pride in the extra time and effort they put into their community service. "Relay for Life was very enjoyable and it was great knowing that I helped in trying to find a cure for cancer," said senior and president Joseph Hamilton.

"Community service is my favorite part of being in NHS because I love feelings like I've really helped someone in need," said senior Madia Brown.

By being in NHS, students built character and became leaders. Through their academic abilities, these chosen students were able to affect lives by reaching out into the community.
