The eighth grade is never at a loss for words. Especially with as many young ladies as they have. They all have opinions on everything and will give it to you without you even having to ask!

Lori and Jodie believe the age for getting driver's license should be fourteen. Dustin thinks it should be deer hunting season all year. Melissa feels you ought to be allowed to brush your hair in class and Adam thinks there should be no detention halls whatsoever. (Why do you suppose he thinks that?) You see, the eighth grade has some pretty interesting things to say.

The phone lines are always busy for most of this group. Parents are happy to have "call waiting" or they would never get a call.

Every student should work as hard as Kendall Carter and all would be doing well.
