

2011 Teacher of the Year

Charles Dukes

Ninth grade homeroom teacher, Charles Dukes has been voted as Andrew Jackson Academy's fourth annual Teacher of the Year.

Mr. Dukes graduated college from the University of South Carolina and later married Becky Cabbage. Together, they have two sons, Adam, who is fifteen years old, and Aaron, who is eight years old. Mr. Dukes used to own and run Dukes Farm Supply in Branchville, South Carolina. When the tornado hit Branchville several years ago, it destroyed his business. He then went into teaching, allowing him to pursue a life-long goal. Mr. Dukes began teaching at Bowman Academy in August of 2008, where he taught for two consecutive years. He began teaching here at Andrew Jackson this year. He enjoys his teaching career because he likes spending time with the students and faculty. Outside of school, he enjoys spending time with his family, Carolina Gamecocks activities, and golfing.

Thank you for all you do!!