

Kevin Taylor and Scott Raynal attest to the fact that there may be a first time for everything: study!

CAUTION! MINDS AT WORK

A time for serious study.

The primary objective of Camden Military Academy, like any other school, is to educate its students. One of many aspects of the CMA academic program is a compulsory studyhall for all cadets. Weeknights from 7 to 9:45 PM, and Saturday until 9, are set aside for study periods. The library is also available during this time for those cadets who have achieved an 85 average for a two-week grading period. Cadets earning less than the 85 must obtain faculty permission to use the facility. Studyhall is beneficial to all for developing good study habits and self-discipline.

Officer-in-Charge Major Burton Gale discusses studyhall regulation with Sergeant-of-the-Guard Neil Armstrong.
