

DISMISSED

The parade is over.

Each company commander dismisses his unit, the last syllable of the command the signal for the inevitable unified roar which expresses elation and acknowledges relief. The sound echoes across campus and cadets look back on a year gone by and forward to the prospects of tomorrow. How will each individual use the knowledge he has worked so hard to acquire? Ideally, he shares it: helping, teaching, profiting from his training — advertising, as it were, as in the original denotation of that word, "calling public attention to, especially by emphasizing desirable qualities so as to arouse a desire to buy or patronize."

The individual and business sponsors advertising in the pages which follow helped immeasurably the publication of this Excalibur, providing a reference book, a record book, and a memory book of Camden Military Academy's 1982-1983 school year.
