

EXCALIBUR

¹Ex-cal-i-bur /ek-'skal-ə-bər/ n (OF Escalibor, fr. ML Caliburnus)
: the legendary sword of King Arthur received from the hands of the Lady of the Lake, to whom it was returned after Arthur was mortally wounded in the last battle against Mordred. It had a scabbard whose wearer could lose no blood. Some versions of the romance call it "Mirandoise." There seems, however, to have been also another sword called Excalibur in the early part of the story. This was the sword, plunged deep into a stone, which could be drawn forth only by the man who was to be king. After 200 knights had failed, Arthur drew it out without difficulty.

Excalibur

The romantic tales about King Arthur and his Knights of the Round Table are among the best-known legends in the Western world. For most of us they were introduction to the world of chivalry — of knights in shining armor seeking honor and glory in combat, of beautiful women watching their lovers engage in brilliant tournament competition. That world seems far removed from our own technologically advanced but uncertain times. The Camden Military Academy connection, however, between this publication, Excalibur, and the legendary Sword Excalibur of King Arthur, is immediate. Our link with the hero Arthur, moreover, is not to a myth but to an actual historical figure who lived in Britain fourteen hundred years ago in times that were, like our own, full of threats.

Daily, contemporary society confronts economic turmoil on an international scale, crime that reaches our very neighborhoods, prospects of nuclear destruction that threatens our very existence. No magical sword scabbard, such as that of Arthur's Excalibur, protects us. But we cope much as Arthur's followers did, staging tournaments on football, baseball, and soccer fields of battle, living by a modern code of honor as knights lived by their chivalric ideals, preparing to transfer lessons learned here to the arena of life, seeking to achieve future goals and to realize present aspirations. Dedication and pride in every turn, each salute harkens to knightly custom, its origin the mutual lifting of helmet visors to reveal identities.

In bonds of honor we salute the legendary, the fabled past and the real present, of which modern myths are made.

T. H. White brought the Arthurian legend into the twentieth century with his The Once and Future King on which the Broadway musical Camelot and its film adaptation were based. White mixes history with boyhood - happy hawking, jousting, humor, and magic. He introduces Sir Thomas Mallory, author of the medieval Morte d'Arthur, as a youthful page. The character Arthur, soon to die, admonishes the boy not to fight in a final battle with Mordred but to ride to Warwickshire where he should think of himself as a messenger of the Round Table and spread its message down through the years to people like you and me.

Put it like this (Arthur says to him). There was a king once, called King Arthur. That is me. When he came to the throne of England, he found that all the kings and barons were fighting against each other like madmen . . . They did a lot of bad things, because they lived by force. Now this king had an idea, and the idea was that force ought to be used, if it were used at all, on behalf of justice, not on its own account. Follow this, young boy. He thought that if he could get his barons fighting for truth, and to help weak people, and to redress wrongs, then their fighting might not be such a bad thing as once it used to be. So he gathered together all the true and kindly people that he knew, and he dressed them in armour, and he made them knights, and taught them his idea, and set them down, at a Round Table. And King Arthur loved his Table with all his heart. He was prouder of it than he was of his own dear wife, and for many years his new knights went about killing ogres, and rescuing damsels and saving poor prisoners, and trying to set the world to rights. That was the King's idea.

Student Life

FOLLOWERS TODAY, LEADERS TOMORROW

Building the best for the future.

A military program provides unique and beneficial training and preparation for life. Neatness, precision, promptness, and self-control become instinctive. An individual's pride in himself, his unit, and the corps stem naturally from the Camden experience.

At CMA when a cadet reaches the age of 14, he begins Junior Reserve Officer Training Corps training in basic leadership and military characteristics. Classes, which meet Tuesday and Thursday afternoons, are required. Academic credits are earned for level completion, I through IV. Drill and ceremonies are integral to the overall program.

The corps is self-governing, the battalion organization providing a structure for day-to-day community activity. A merit-demerit system and an honor council which investigates infractions of academy rules and regulations provide effective incentive and control. As cadets develop as individuals, they climb the leadership ladder, first taking orders, later giving them.

Cadet volunteers keep the corps functioning in support areas, including supply, laundry, and armory, and provide the bugler, cannon detail, and company clerk functions. Department of the Army evaluation rates CMA as an Honor Unit with Distinction.

COMMUNITY SERVICE

It's there when you need it.

Many individuals working as a team keep CMA functioning efficiently. Everyone has to eat, and Mrs. Bessie Davis, Dietician, and her kitchen staff and cadet KP's assure a well-nourished corps. Laundry moves out and in on schedule. Supply items are ordered, received, accounted for, and issued. If illness strikes or if continuing treatment is required, Nurse Neeka Wilson provides care or assures appropriate referral to professional Camden medical personnel. Cadets are on the move—leave afternoons and evenings, Sunday church, intramural sports play, cultural events (to name but a few)—and cadet volunteers chauffeur and maintain a fleet of vans and vintage buses.

BEAUTIES AND THE BEAT

Girls are especially important to boys who attend an all-male boarding school. In the fall and at commencement, cadets, their dates, families, and friends turn out in numbers to dance the night away. In February, juniors host seniors at the annual junior-senior prom. The Dance Committee does it all.

THE BEAUTIES

Jennifer Sumper, Miss Excalibur, is a senior at Lexington High School, Lexington, South Carolina. At 17, five feet eight inches tall, with light brown hair and brown eyes, she's made her sponsor, Bobby Clemenz, very proud.

From North Myrtle Beach High School, First Runner-up Kathy Delgado is 16, five feet tall. She has brown hair and green-brown eyes, John Courtney is her sponsor.

Second Runner-up is Dana Ayers, a senior at Summer-ville High School. She is five feet eight inches tall, weighs 115 pounds, and has beautiful hazel eyes and brunette hair. Gary McElveen sponsored her.

Doug Farel sponsored Marcia Farel, a Myers Park High School Senior from Charlotte, North Carolina. She is 17, with light brown hair and green eyes. She is five feet four inches tall and weighs 95 pounds.

Gil Kane and John Jakes recreate the violent and desperate times of King Arthur in the novel Excalibur. A conversation between Sir Gawain, nephew of the king and regarded in early romances as the model of chivalry, and King Arthur provide insight into knightly concepts of individual dedication, the gist of which, however metaphorical, applies to each of us today.

Just as this sword, no matter what its qualities, can only be used if it is picked up, wielded, so too a man's life. You may let it lay or let others pick it up and use it for their designs. Or you may take it and decide its best use in light of your own convictions.

Just as this sword is my weapon, the vessel that holds the means of my defense and offense, so am I a weapon of our people, a vessel of our spirit. Our people . . . their combined bloods, mingled visions that hold together more than the sum of their parts — they are our master. I shall have their dreams to lead me, to pick me up.

A LOSING SEASON

Spartans chalk a final mark of 0-7. George Pagan's running. Sean Boone picked off a good pass and Jonathan Hill's tackles were a defense standout.

"That Number 22 ate us up," Coach Emory Bowers observed after we dropped our opening game 41-0 to Lewisville on their turf September 19. Number 22 was Wesley McFadden, high on college recruiters' lists, and only one of many carnivores to come, we discovered, as the season progressed. "We didn't play too badly. We fumbled deep in our own territory and gave 'em three touchdowns."

Bowers said of Charlotte Latin's Hawks in a 35-0 home field loss on September 30, "They ate us up on passes." Between Latin's scoring thrusts, we moved the ball well at times, mostly behind Bethune took us 18-0 on October 10. Just before the end of the first half, with Bethune 12-0, we moved from our 49 to a first and goal at the Wildcats' one. Quarterback Richie Cannon lost the handle on the snap, Bethune recovered, and the Spartans had nothing. "I tasted that touchdown," Bowers said.

Aynor's Blue Jackets struck early and often on October 17, a 47-0 triumph for them. The Spartans enjoyed little success offensively, having lost our entire starting backfield to injuries.

Scoreless in four games, the Spartans finally put 12 points on the board against winless Heathwood Hall on 21 October. The Highlanders, however, managed one more score — a touchdown in sudden death overtime — to claim an 18-12 victory and the Palmetto Athletic Conference championship.

"We started off looking pretty good, but then we'd hold it one down and fumble," Coach Bowers said of the St. Angela's Academy 25-0 victory on October 28. Quarterback Steve Witter completed seven of 16 passes for 120 yards in that contest, and Jonathan Hill led the Spartan defense with 18 tackles. Football season ended at home on November 4 with a 32-0 loss to Blackville-Hilda, a final season mark of 0-7.

PAC CHAMPS

A slow start, a blazing finish.

With a combination of power drives, good passing, and chance plays, the JV's turned a losing season into a winning one and earned the conference championship. The Junior Spartans opened up the year with a defeat at Christ Church. The team played good hard-hitting ball, but couldn't pull it off at the end. The second game against Cardinal Newman was another tough defeat, the team having again played a hard-fought game.

Spirits, though, did not falter. Coach Eric Boland and his determined JV's went to Bates where, baptized by fire, they tasted victory. Passing in this game by Jay Byerly was of the best and that winning feeling carried the young Spartans through the rest of the season. The next win, against Heathwood Hall, brought with it the Palmetto Athletic Conference (PAC) championship. Power drives by Pat Langley, coupled with accurate passing by Jay Byerly, contributed largely to this win.

The JV's finished the year with a bang by defeating Hammond Academy. In this contest the team pulled a chance play that allowed them to score in the first action. After that, it was all down hill, a most rewarding season closure.

A TURN-AROUND SEASON

A "fast-break" destined to score.

Stepping into a new athletic department, Coach Eric Boland encountered a team that hadn't played together before, and formed the varsity basketball team into one of the best teams in the conference. From a 7-12 season, the Spartans emerged with an 11-8 record. In addition, CMA can boast that Wayne Snyder is an all-conference center, quiet an accomplishment for a new coach and for the Spartans.

EXPERIENCE IS THE GOAL

A slow start, but a final quick "lay-up."

For a team playing primarily to gain experience, the Junior Varsity Basketball Team made many of their opponents take a hard second look. With a 6-5 season, several losses by only the merest margin, coach Larry Seymour's JV Spartans possessed and exhibited a determination that's hard to beat. The future varsity is a team the entire corps is proud to claim.

Getting in shape.

An important part of everyone's life is to be well-rounded, not only to develop his intellect but also to be in top physical shape. CMA emphasizes both.

The English novelist Mary Stewart uses the Arthurian legend to spin a spellbinding tale in her novel The Hollow Hills set in fifth century Britain. Merlin, magician and counselor to King Arthur, is narrator of the ancient story which has profound relevance to these times and in this place.

For a long time the sword lay there still like a weapon newly burned, waiting for the hand which will lift and wield it.

FACULTY AND STAFF

TOWARDS TOMORROW

All, regardless of race or class or economic status, are entitled to a fair chance and to the tools for developing their individual powers of mind and spirit to the utmost. This promise means that all children by virtue of their own efforts, competently guided, can hope to attain the mature and informed judgment needed to secure gainful employment, and to manage their own lives, thereby serving not only their own interests but also the progress of society itself.

The statement is part of the National Commission on Excellence in Education's report A Nation at Risk: The Imperative for Educational Reform, issued in mid-spring 1983. Faculty and staff here are dedicated to a common goal: helping each student realize his fullest potential, developing self-discipline and encouraging a determination to excel.

During the Heathwood Hall JV contest, Coach Eric Boland, (above) exhorts his players to "Go!" On the sidelines, expressing "big chiefs" in body language, Major Burton Gale, Major Leigh Dellinger, Major James Sinclair, and Cadet Charles Holley stolidly follow the action; Lisa Lyles and her escort Ray Hudson converse; and Doug Mahan quits the scene.

Sir Thomas Malory wrote Morte d'Arthur in the fifteenth century, in a time of transition. The feudal order was dying, gunpowder replaced the lance, and a new aristocratic code superseded chivalry. Malory recreated the romance of earlier times in his story of heroes and kings. For his contemporaries and for us today, his readers may escape the disorder and uneasiness of the times, recapture lost ideals of a romantic past.

In the following account young Arthur, accompanied by his faithful Merlin, court magician, receives his sword Excalibur from the Lady of the Lake.

No force, said Merlin, hereby is a sword that shall be yours, an I may.

So they rode till they came to a lake, the which was a fair water and broad, and in the midst of the lake Arthur was ware of an arm clothed in white samite, that held a fair sword in that hand.

Lo! said Merlin, yonder is that sword that I spake of. With that they saw a damsel going upon the lake.

What damsel is that? said Arthur.

That is the Lady of the Lake, said Merlin; and within that lake is a rock, and therein is as fair a place as any on earth, and richly beseen; and this damsel will come to you anon, and then speak ye fair to her that she will give you that sword. Anon withal came the damsel unto Arthur, and saluted him, and he her again.

Damsel, said Arthur, what sword is that, that yonder the arm holdeth above the water? I would it were mine, for I have no sword.

Sir Arthur, king, said the damsel, that sword is mine, and if ye will give me a gift when I ask it you, ye shall have it.

By my faith, said Arthur, I will give you what gift ye will ask.

Well! said the damsel, go ye into yonder barge, and row yourself to the sword, and take it and the scabbard with you, and I will ask my gift when I see my time. So Sir Arthur and Merlin alighted and tied their horses to two trees, and so they went into the ship, and when they came to the sword that the hand held, Sir Arthur took it up by the handles, and took it with him, and the arm and the hand went under the water. And so they came unto the land and rode forth.

Then Sir Arthur looked on the sword, and liked it passing well.

Whether liketh you better, said Merlin, the sword or the scabbard?

Me liketh better the sword, said Arthur.

Ye are more unwise, said Merlin, for the scabbard is worth ten of the sword, for whiles ye have the scabbard upon you, ye shall never lose no blood, be ye never so sore wounded; therefore keep well the scabbard always with you. So they came unto Carlion, whereof his knights were passing glad. And when they heard of his adventures, they marveled that he would jeopard his person so, alone. But all men of worship said it was merry to be under such a chieftain, that would put his person in adventure as other poor knights did.

Captain Dale Randolph teaches his third period Spanish class in the recreation center, before restoration of the fire-damaged classroom building.

Major David Green gives a few pointers to CMA

LIFE IS CHALLENGE

We're preparing now.

Every student deserves a fair chance to succeed in higher education. To do so, he must be well prepared for college-level study, once the privilege of a few, now brought within the reach of a majority of high school graduates.

Only when students are adequately prepared can they develop their full potential by taking advantage of all resources of college and community, as good for the nation as it will be for individual students. In addition to what students learn, developing personal characteristics such as drive, motivation, interest, experience, and adaptability are important to getting the most out of college. Social and coping skills are acquired for life.

The basic academic competencies of reading, writing, speaking and listening, mathematics, reasoning, and studying are essential for academic success. Interrelated and interdependent to those competencies are the basic academic subjects of English, the arts, mathematics, science, social studies, and foreign language. The CMA curriculum stresses basic academics.

Fluency in mathematics, an indispensable language of science and technology, as well as business and finance, contributes to how well cadets will fare in our contemporary world. It is essential to students' intellectual development.

Science, the study of the natural world, both useful and rewarding, provides a sense of the order in the universe. It is one of civilization's major intellectual achievements.

Social studies enable people to perform effectively as citizens in a democratic society. They need knowledge about central institutions and values in their own society and in other major societies around the world.

Knowledge of another language fosters greater awareness of cultural diversity among the world's peoples. Individuals who have foreign language skills can appreciate more readily other people's values and ways of life. Camden offers training in both French and Spanish.

CMA faculty strive to make students self-sufficient so they don't need the teacher. During tutorials and informal periods, questions can come: those which a student might not want to expose in front of the full class. The teacher not only provides information but also piques curiosity: not only to answer questions, but also to raise them.

Regular evening study periods encourage the creativity which comes from establishing good work habits. The creative writing of a poet and the disciplined training of an athlete both demand repetitious and often tedious training.

CMA faculty believe their students can do well. Students called "average," but possessing determination and self-discipline, come to Camden, and often end up being the most successful. If a student lacks self-discipline, he can do very little with talent or interest.

The year marked academic change. Inaugurated were Advanced Placement programs in English and in Spanish, taught by Major Burton Gale and Dr. Dale Randolph, respectively. A major classroom building was gutted by fire in mid-summer, necessitating complete reconstruction. A comfortable and efficient learning space resulted. Cadets from throughout the United States and from several foreign countries continue to contribute to a cosmopolitan school character.

Kelly Schrader conduct his fourth period Civics Class.

Education is life.

Mike Stone obtains a bit of extra help in Algebra I from Major Leigh Dellinger. Below: The Band plays for the enjoyment of visiting parents and friends during fall Visitors Day.

Sara Johnson, Camden Fine Arts Center artist-in-residence, entertains cadets during an assembly program.

Sid Myers inquires about higher education at Ed Op Day, Lugoff-Elgin High School.

Columbia Correctional Institute trustees warn cadets that crime does not pay (they ought to know) during an assembly in the gym. It's called "Get Smart."

LOST IN THOUGHT . . .

. . . and stacks of books.

Quiet, relaxed, conducive to intellectual development—such words suggest the atmosphere the library provides. Nestled among stacks of books, students often are reading, researching, writing, or simply thinking. The library is integral to life at Camden Military Academy.

Among most frequent library visitors are harried members of the debate team, burning the midnight oil in an effort to prepare themselves and complete their research. Members of the team, advised by Captain Kelly Schrader, participate in competition throughout North and South Carolina and Georgia.

The James F. Risher Chapter of the National Forensics League rolls on.

Mrs. Melinda Kane, Librarian, and Robert Lucas, library assistant, shelve books.

Below: Mrs. Gail Deane supervises the library during weeknights.

A BREED APART

Earning a Block "C" in a varsity sport and continuing good military and academic standing takes a special person. Block "C" membership provides the opportunity for those athletically inclined cadets to break away and to enjoy excursions, such as to Columbia Mall, downtown, and for informal activities on campus.

Whether lettering in football, basketball, soccer, baseball, track, golf, rifle or drill team, being a Spartan takes determination, and becoming a Block "C" member builds pride in the individual and his school.

Many of the seniors, pictured opposite (including eighty per cent of the five-year cadets) earned their letters. Whether or not a cadet sports a Block "C" jacket, everyone recognizes and appreciates the symbol and its meaning.

Vice-president George Pagan and President Richie Cannon exemplify their pride in the Spartans.

Block C: Counterclockwise from upper right, Windsor, Callaway, Baucom, Ashley, Ward, Hudson, Coulter, Lassiter, Owen, unidentifiable, Geiger, Myers, AA O'Connor, Parker, Whitley, Hill, White, Cecil, Craig, Snyder, Tamburrino, Boone, Carnes, unidentifiable, unidentifiable, Hutto, Watson, Stone, Witter, Stotts, Glanton, Clemenz, O'Dell, Hermoso, Boyd, Cox, Hoffman, Pagan, Greene, Tyson, Sloan, Croom, Crull, Flowe, Mueller, Luker, Mooneyhan, Holley, Vogt, Farthing, Eicher, Stewart, Cannon.

Five-Year Cadets: Barry Luker, Jamie Eidson, Chuck Mooneyhan, Sam Tyson. Below: Senior Class of NINETEEN HUNDRED EIGHTY-FOUR.

AESTHETES AND GREEKS

Art and honor in club and society.

Fine Arts Club members are concerned with expression that goes beyond ordinary speaking and writing. Capt. Larry Seymour, an accomplished wildlife artist and expert scrimshaw carver, advises the group and heightens members' abilities to understand and to appreciate the unique qualities of each of the arts. Besides discussing, analyzing, and evaluating the structure of a work of visual art, Fine Arts Club members in numbers express themselves in one or more of the art forms, notably ceramics. Coupled with the enrichment of self-expression, trips to galleries, slideshowings, and speakers contribute to appreciation of and response to the artistic expression of others.

Delta Kappa Sigma (DKS) is a society of no more than 15 members selected from juniors and seniors by the faculty, and chosen for their academic attainments, leadership ability, and their participation in extracurricular activities. The club is self-supporting, members earning their own money to finance trips and entertainment. DKS is a special group with special concerns for excellence.

Fine Arts Club Vice-president Chip O'Dell and President George Pagan admire a painting by Club adviser Capt Larry Seymour.

Capt Larry Seymour, exhibits an original painting to the assembled membership.

Brad Cox buys candy from DKS salespersonnel Chris Watson, Bill Jaeger, and Ian Baucom.

President Richie Cannon (standing) addresses DKS members Jay Harris, Brian Jones, Ian Baucom, Bill Carnes, Chip O'Dell, Bill Jaeger, Chris Watson, Frank Hanna, and adviser Mark Buff.

THE PEN IS MIGHTIER THAN THE SWORD

Cadets may wield both.

The Adjutant, CMA's weekly newspaper, develops through many stages in its publication. Monday nights the staff meets in the evening to assign stories for the next issue. Editor-in-Chief Paul Tamburrino directs reporters in selecting stories of interest to readers. Capt. Dale Randolph, Adviser, is present during the process.

Reporters collect information the next day and on Tuesday night the staff again meets, during studyhall, to finish up stories. News Editor Jay Harris and Sports Editor Craig Moyer then edit and proofread. Cadet Tamburrino and Capt. Randolph type up master copy and deliver it to Mrs. Fran Ashburn at the office for reproduction. Distribution is automatic to faculty and staff, board of trustees, and cadets who receive theirs door-to-door.

The Adjutant keeps the CMA community informed.

You're now reading the Excalibur, produced by Major Burton Gale's English Composition Class during first semester. Members of the 1983-1984 annual staff had no previous experience in year-book preparation, but by hook or crook the group met publisher demands for copy, layout, and cropped photos.

Withstanding their adviser's constant prodding and direct encouragement, the publication's in print. Sean Matthews and Greg Adcock produced the people section; Tyler McCreery and Gene Callaway, sports; Mike White worked on military/student life; Mike Stone and Lawrence Bluemmel helped prepare clubs and academics; Mike Coffey compiled advertising copy; Scott Webb and Chris Theodoropoulos, mid-term arrivals to the course, assisted. Each hopes Excalibur 1984 adequately records the year's happenings, an aid to memory in years to come.

Gari Ward, Excalibur candid photographer, shoots . . .

. . . Preston Stout and David Doerr observing a mason at work on restoring the fire-damaged classroom building.

Adjutant Staff: Jay Harris, Editor Paul Tamburrino, Capt Dale Randolph (adviser), Guillermo Contreras, Steven Stotts, Chris Moyer, Sean Matthews, Dwight Cauthen, Walter Glanton, Chris Sloan, Shannon Cushman, and Chris McKenzie.

Alfred, Lord Tennyson, Queen Victoria's poet laureate, saw Arthur as the ideal Englishman, an inspiration to readers in any age. In The Idylls of the King, the poet presented him as an incarnation of the particular ideals which appealed most strongly to the Victorian, an analogy from which readers may draw parallels for their own time. Tennyson stressed virtues which seemed to him excellent — idealism, chivalry, unselfish patriotism, religious faith — and showed that even the finest and greatest ideals often go down in defeat, as Arthur's did.

And slowly answer'd Arthur from the barge:
'The old order changeth, yielding place to new,
And God fulfils himself in many ways,
Lest one good custom should corrupt the world.
Comfort thyself: what comfort is in me?
I have lived my life, and that which I have done
May He within Himself make pure! but thou,
If thou shouldst never see my face again,
Pray for my soul. More things are wrought by prayer
Than this world dreams of ...'

THE SWORD AND THE BOOK

Epilogue as foreword.

Another school year. And now it is all gone, like an insubstantial pageant faded. Seniors will not come to us again next year, and our imaginations can but feebly penetrate to them. Only along the aisles at commencement, only as we gaze upon their silent figures — some openly tearful, some crying within, some jubilant — faint conceptions form of what these men were and what they will become, what we are and may be.
