

Senior Travis Kinard calculates a bill with a client at Electronic Warehouse. "I like working at Electronic Warehouse because it's interesting and I learn new skills and I'm able to use them," Travis said.

Senior Chloe Cole quickly rings up a customer at Reids. "I've been working at Reid's for almost two months. It takes up a lot of my time, but when I do have time off, I have money," Chloe said.

"My jobs is easy. It's easy to make pizzas," junior Ashley Chickering said.

"I would like to work at an icecream shop, I think it would be fun," junior Heather Beach said.

"I like the money I make and the girls that walk through the door," freshman Amante Fryar said.

"I don't have a job because I don't have a lot of time," junior Danielle Campbell said.

"The thing I like about working at Buck's Pizza is answering phone calls and running the register," junior Elizabeth Arnold said.

Juniors Starkeedra Simmons and Ashley Chickering ring up a customer at Buck's Pizza. "I enjoy working at Buck's Pizza because I make my own money and I like the people that I work with," Starkeedra said.

Part of growing up was realizing money did not grow on trees, and a person's parents were not always going to be your personal bank, well unless they were one of the few lucky exceptions. Either way students earning their own money was like stepping out on their own. Finding a job so they can gain that independence and have their own money, instead of always having to ask, is considered one of the biggest steps into adulthood. All the students caught on pretty quickly that money goes by fast, especially when using their own. Whether their high school job was at Burger King to get clothes, or baby-sitting to get a car, in the end it's all about the pride of saying "it's mine", and they got it with their own money, that they worked hard for. Junior Amanda Rucker said, "I work at Main Street Diner, and I enjoy meeting new people and having my own money." So, the question is how do you make your own money?

-Lindsey Craven

What Do You Do For Money Hunny

Jobs