"I really enjoyed this years production. It was one of the most entertaining we've ever done. It was fun to play the role of an outcast 'trench-coat' kid," senior Matthew Porter said.

Lights, Camera, Action. A few words common to the field of drama. The schools' drama group was quite busy preparing for the fall production of Spirator City (with some veteran actors such as Doug Ranly, Joseph Mobley and Kayla Souza), along with some new actors - John Hiott, and Kayla Murdaugh, the show was a hit.

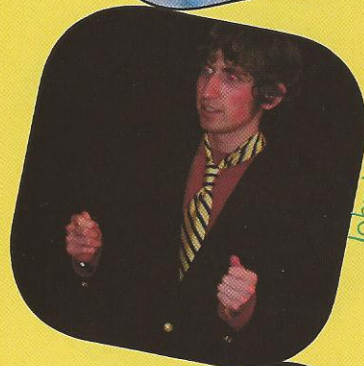

From the crazy plot to funny lines every aspect of the play helped make it memorable. The group all worked hard after school for two months to get prepared for opening night. It was difficult and hard for them to keep their straight faces due to the hilarity of the play.

While playing the principal in Spirator City, Senior Mark "Doug" Ranly restrained Senior Lauren Mclees, the ever elusive and previously named culprit. "This years' play was a little ironic, but I had fun working with everyone and meeting new people," Doug said.

Junior Danielle Schmitt and Senior Joseph Mobley waited for the judgement of their friend in "Spirator City."
