

1. Players shook hands to mark the commencing of the game.

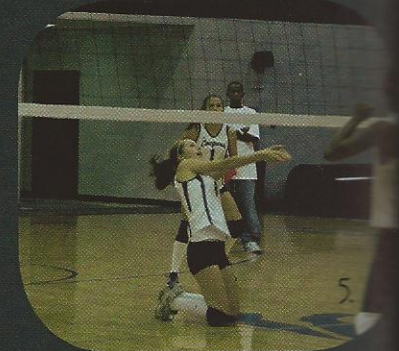

2. Preparing to drive the ball over the net, sophomore Payton Frazier went up for the hit. "At least we almost beat Summerville," Payton said.

3. Sophomore Kimberly Robertson bumped the ball forward to her teammates. "I like volleyball because you are always moving and never just sitting around," Kimberly said.

4. Getting ready to move toward the ball, senior Lauren McLees prepared to bump the ball. "During the game all I really focus on is the actual game and making sure I'm in position," Lauren said.

5. Giving it her all, sophomore Sarah Smoak dove to hit the ball to the opposing team. "I love the sport because it's really fast paced and exciting," Sarah said.

6. Putting her best foot forward, sophomore Kennedy Gibson clobbered the ball to the opposing team. "Everybody was cool and we had fun, I'm going to miss the seniors," Kennedy said.

Pump up the Volume

Knowing that hard work and determination would take them a long way, the volleyball team practiced avidly. "This year we practiced diligently and our skills improved," junior Lindsey Craven said.

Anxious spirits and apprehension came in line upon the blowing of the whistle and commencement of the game. The exhausting and grueling practices finally paid off when they won the game.

Volleyball isn't just a game of dedication and determination but it also requires cooperation. The members of the team had to work together to achieve the success and victory that they have.
