

1. Senior Selita Hills jumps for the ball. "Do what you can to be a better player don't give up, and you're never too good to learn more," Selita said.

2. Junior Branshea Brown reaches for the ball against Goose Creek. "Do your work and don't mess up in school because it's important, never give up," Branshea said.

3. Sophomore Jocelyn Washington gets ready to make her next move toward the basket. "The team has come together well," Jocelyn said.

4. Junior Tierra Simmons gets ready to guard a player. "Never give up and always do what you have to in order to win," Tierra said.

5. Sophomore Shalae Edwards blocks a Fort Dorchester player. "The team means everything to me," Shalae said.

6. Senior Amani Hills shoots the ball hoping to get another three points on the board for the team. "My team means everything to me, I would do just about anything for them," Amani said.

7. Sophomore Ilesha Burns blocks a Fort Dorchester player. "My biggest inspiration is my parents. Everytime I hear them I try to work harder," Ilesha said.

I believe I can fly

It came to be a routine that in the mornings you would listen to the announcements not to hear about the everyday things but to hear about the girls basketball win the previous night. How do these girls do it? That was a question rarely asked, how could they not? The girls basketball team had some of the best team unity in the region, and their dedication was unimaginable. Many people had doubts coming into the season due to their being a new coach and the past records the team held. The new coach, Loudenslager, took the girls over and beyond what was expected and gave them everything they needed to step it up to a level the team had never stepped into before. Everyone that wore the jersey worked hard for what they got, being in a weight lifting class before the season even started all the way to the end having every afternoon dedicated to team practices. When you take a moment to watch them play you could see that they are more of a family then anything. On and off the court the girls have allowed themselves to be leaders. "My team means everything to me, we are one big unit, actually we are more than that, we're a family," junior Mara Broughton said. Pride, hustle, determination are only a few of the words that describe the girls and their season. They truly show what a family should
