Senior Glenn Walker was in the hallway before the bell rang for second period. "CCHS is different from Stratford because we have less activities here and it's kind of boring," Glenn said.

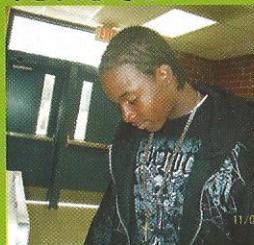

Time For A Change!

Going to a new school can be really difficult. Doors of opportunity can be opened, but that does not necessarily make for a smooth transition. Students were surrounded with new people, a new environment, and new rules. This year, the school had to make sure that transfer students were able to receive credits that they already earned from their other schools and that state standards were upheld with students from other states.

Junior Londell Pickney was standing in the hallway during his third period while Mrs. Smoke went over the answers to a test from the day before. "CCHS a lot stricter than my old school in New York," Londell said.

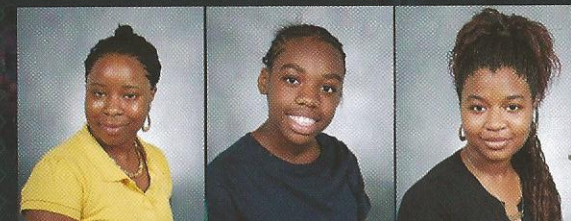

Senior Ashley Oliver sat in the Commons Area during lunch talking with one of her friends. "I like it here because most of the teachers are cool and the people are really nice," Ashley said.
