

Rally for Charity

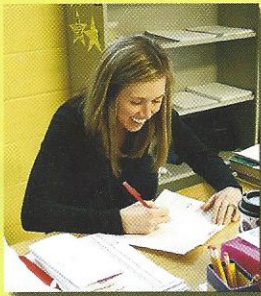

From the classroom to the basketball court, the Student-Faculty basketball game is an exciting topic. Teachers and students played basketball against one another to entertain for charity. Student Council and NHS sponsored the event. All of the money raised for the game was donated to Pennies for Patients. The students were also allowed to participate in a dress down day, and all of the dress down proceeds went to Relay for Life. It was clear that some teachers and students were more skilled at basketball than others, which made for an interesting game. Junior Presley Holt showed her unwavering support, "I felt it was a fair game this year. Go Students!" The students pulled a thrilling last minute victory, ending the long six year streak of losing.

1. Senior Lorenzo Shider concentrates fully on the basketball game, dribbling the ball down the court with skill.
2. Sophomore Erika Sheffield and friends performed the "South Dallas Swag" during half-time.
3. Senior Kyla Floyd pumps herself up before the game. Kyla stated, "it was very fun because it gave me an opportunity to compete in a real game this year!"
4. Junior Presley Holt shows off the colorful poster she made for her coach, Mrs. Townsend. "She's my best friend, and I wanted to cheer her on just as she does me," Presley explained.

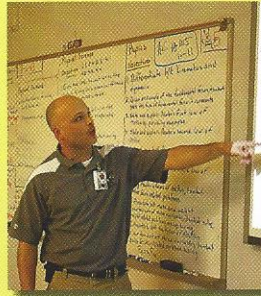

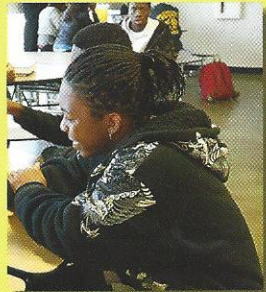

Mr. Birch rushes in to score a point for the faculty, but was blocked by a student. "For charity, I would do it all over again. It was a great cause to play for, and I had a blast! I look forward to doing it again in the near future," Mr. Birch said. The enjoyment experienced from Mr. Birch was a mutual feeling shared by all the students and all the faculty.

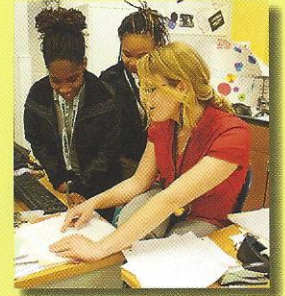

Mrs. Townsend had a little experience going into the game. "I played through my freshman year of high school," she explained.

Senior Reggie Pontoon had some years of basketball under his belt for the game. "I've played basketball since the eighth grade," Reggie said.

Senior Christine Nesmith was one of the students that went into the game with no experience at all.

Mrs. Hanson had no basketball experience but was entertained regardless. "I was impressed with Mr. Warren's rebounding madness," she laughed.
