

Grab the Imagination

Painting, sculpting, sketching, and shading is typically what you would think of when you think about art, when really there is so much more. "You have to use the elements of art, like shape and line," explained sophomore Athena Kisner. The artwork displayed in the hallways are very spectacular. There are drawings, silhouettes, and sculptures in the showcase. Many people enjoy looking at the art work of the students. "Art enables people to do what they didn't think they could do," stated art teacher Sally Davis. Where there's art, there is color. Junior Cameron Doby said, "green is my favorite color; it's pretty awesome." Everyone is artistic in some way, and here at CCHS, the Cougars know how to embrace it.

1. Freshman Zachary Crosby diligently works on his project for Mrs. Waddell. Zachary said, "Art inspires me to be creative."

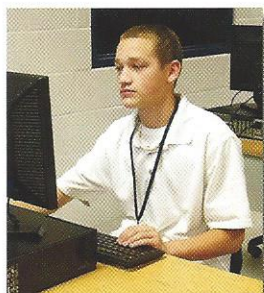

2. Freshman Casey Satterfield explores the wonders of creativity. Shading was an important component in the art classes.

3. Junior Summer Bennett and another video art student scavenge the halls, video camera in hand, during the crazy events of Spirit Week.

4. Mrs. Waddell, a video and art teacher, aids a student in need. "My dad is my inspiration in life. He showed me how wonderful art could be," said Ms. Waddell.

"I think that Art is a good class to take while you're in high school," says senior Andrew Harrison.

Senior Shakema Bennett says "I like art because you can express yourself."

Sophomore Heather Stevens says, "Art gives you the chance to express yourself and also gives you time to think."
