

Pocket the Ace

Racket in hand, the boys did their best as they faced some of the school's top rivals. Some players have a desire to play tennis in college. "What benefits me in tennis is having an opportunity to make new friends," freshman Ian O'Brien stated. For some athletes, tennis is a great way to relieve stress, but all participants find that tennis keeps them very fit. Even though they had a small team, they hoped that their success would encourage others to join. Tennis was a very competitive sport that motivated players to do their best. The team practices were beneficial for strategy planning and ace-making. The boys of the tennis team stepped up to represent their school, and they still get to do what they love.

1. CCMS student Datt Patal

2. CCMS student David Fanchette

3. Freshman Charles Bailey

4. Freshman Cody Coursen

5. Freshman Charles Bailey

6. Freshman Cody Coursen returns the ball after the serve. "I like tennis because it helps me with my strength and my social skills," Cody explained.

CCMS student Joey Brunson said, "the best part about being in tennis is being able to meet new people and to play."

Freshman Ian O'Brien says, "one of my friends encouraged me to (join tennis)."

"Playing tennis makes me a better athlete," freshman Charles Bailey admitted.

Freshman Cody Coursen remains hard at work at a computer, trying to finish his task.

