

Zip Through the Field

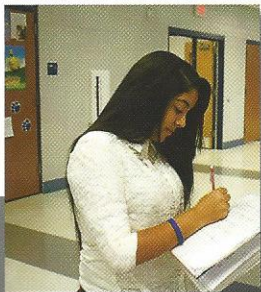

Out with the old and in with the new! The junior varsity soccer team is in it to win it. Starting the year off with a new coach, our junior varsity girls have learned how to work hard together and rally like any great team. Through their practices and games, all the players have overcome defeat to come out on top. The players work five days a week practicing for the games and improving their skills. Coach Matt Hooker has a optimistic outlook and game plan for the girls to go for the win out on the field. Coach Hooker said, "I am looking forward to a great season; the team looks as though it has a lot of talent as well as a good chemistry with everyone on the team."

The girls huddle around the coach talking about the game plan as they prepare themselves to play their best game this season. The junior varsity girls played very well in the end.

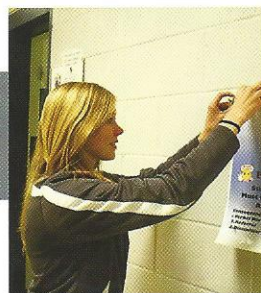

1. CCMS student, Faith Allen #26
2. Senior Alyssa Hughes, #2, nearly intercepts a pass to an opposing player.
3. The junior varsity soccer players defend the ball and work together to score a point.
4. CCMS student Samantha Calcutt #15
5. CCMS student Sara Ramey, #7, looks down field for an open player to pass to in order to make a play.

Freshman Jasmine Llamas started playing soccer because she wanted to try something new.

"I have been playing soccer for three years," said junior Victoria Hickman.

Sophomore Marissa O'Quinn shared, "I like the competition, and the feeling it gives me when we do well."

Sophomore Malaysia Malone was questioned what was her least favorite rule in soccer and added "no hands."
