

GRAND OPENING

The only thing man can be sure of is change. We came to the first day of school and pushed our way and moved and hurried and flew down the crowded hallways. Sometimes we felt joy or sadness, but a pattern emerged. This year was the same but different than the years before. Like the strings of the world in our hands something essential had changed. What used to be John C. Calhoun Academy had made the inevitable change that time required and became Collection Prep. Academy on July 1, 1990. Being the first year of this new school, CPA, a family was formed around our lives. The daily education, the various activities, and organizations formed the training program, which was designed to produce men and women fitting in mind, body, and spirit for the responsibilities of future life. So a year has come and gone, the first year of CPA has truly been a GRAND OPENING!

Celebration. The beginning of CPA is certainly something to cheer about. These middle school kids shout for joy about CPA's Grand Opening.

Over night? Could we have caught Cope Johnston and Dargan Rowe attempting to stay overnight in their lockers so they won't be late for CPA's GRAND OPENING?
