

Jesse Walker struts his stuff on Hippie Day during Spirit Week. Hippie Day was a big success among the older students because they only had to go through their parents old clothes to find something to wear. The younger students had a little more trouble finding clothes.

Spirit Week at Colleton Prep is always a huge success because everyone loves to be involved. Monday was Kris-Kros Day, where everyone wears their clothes backwards. On Tuesday, the halls were filled with students dressed in their most comfortable pajamas. Wednesday began to look as if the school had been transported back in time to the sixties as everyone dressed as they thought a hippie would. Rednecks filled the hall on Thursday for Redneck Day, while on Friday everyone got the spirit and dressed in blue and white. The week ended with a pep rally in the gym where grades six through twelve battled it out during the skit contest, which the Juniors won. There was a poster contest for the lower school which was judged at the pep rally also. There was also a contest to see which class could generate the most spirit through out the entire pep rally. The high school, middle school, and lower school showed each other that we all have the spirit that it takes to support our mighty Hawks and lead them to yet another win to add to their winners column.

This group of hippies stop to pose for a picture before heading off to class. Spirit Week has brought the different classes together because of the high volumes of spirit that they were generating. Participation and spirit are just two of the many things that our students at Colleton Prep know something about.
