

Expanding the classroom

The Library and Computer classroom provided resources for the students to learn and further expand the teachings of the classroom. In the library they received access to the internet which was enjoyed and utilized by many students. Anne Daniels, the librarian, was always available to help students with internet use, research or to monitor tests. Students also had a variety of magazines available for them to read. Newspapers were also available which became important to students whose classes required articles or essays on current events. Mrs. Terri Anne Bennett, the keyboarding and computer instructor, taught her students many valuable lessons including typing, spreadsheets, and Corel Word Perfect 7.

Sophomore Mary Stone concentrates on completing her computer class assignment. Wonder if she's looking at the screen or the keys?

Jesse Fillion completes his typing assignment. No peeking at the keys, Jesse!

CPA librarian Mrs. Daniels checks out a book for a student.