

Sarah,

As we look back on your school years, we remember the joy you have brought into our lives. It seems like yesterday you graduated from kindergarten...now high school! Sarah and Chris, it's hard to separate the two. You two have been so close. You are like brother and sister instead of cousins. Since you two were babies, it has been Sarah looking out for Chris, Chris looking out for Sarah.

Sarah, you have faced times in your young life that you should have been spared. Your daddy, Mema, and Granddaddy loved you so much. They still look over you in a special way.

The experiences, joys, and sorrows that have happened in the past have worked together to make you a very special person. You are, SARAH! Your enthusiasm with life, your love for others and your beautiful smile radiate who you are.

The race begins here! Up to now it has been practice. You have a fundamental education and Christian morals to take you anywhere you choose. Be sure that God directs your path in everything you do. Take time to ask God for his guidance and more importantly, wait for his answer in all things. The future is full of opportunities, take each opportunity to learn, improve yourself, and most of all to be happy.

*We love you,
Aunt Cookie and Chris*

p.s. Chris thanks you for your hard work on his behalf.
