

Mixed Emotions Abound At JCCA

The 1982-83 school year was one filled with mixed emotions ... joys, sorrows, laughter, and tears. Students endured never ending homework and tests, celebrated victories and suffered defeats, enjoyed good times with friends, and painfully withstood heartaches and disappointments.

John C. Calhoun Academy was an institution for learning ... scholastically, socially, athletically, and personally. Each member of the student body attended six classes daily to further his education. He made new friendships and strengthened the old. He competed with others and learned to be disciplined and persevering. Through school and outside activities, the student learned more about himself and found the extent of his capabilities.

The students of John C. stood proud and confident when facing challenges and obstacles. Although they did not always succeed in their endeavors, they learned from their mistakes and triumphed in their accomplishments. Despite all the students had to undertake, they remained the few, the proud, the Hawks!

Some second graders huddle together to keep warm in the cold weather.

Mikie Padgett and Wesley Ulmer openly express their happiness to be outside.
