

Heroes In Hand-me-downs

Under the excellent coaching of Ron Lassiter and David MacArthur, the Junior Varsity Boys' basketball team of 1984-85 did a fine job of executing this season. Led by such talented individuals as Mike Hiott and Chad Brightwell, the team found it difficult to unite the many individual skills when playing as a whole. With this unsuccessfulness, a few disappointing games were experienced by the "heroes in hand-me-downs." Even so, the boys continued to play with enthusiasm and determination throughout the entire season. At the end of the basketball year, the boys agreed that even though the record was disappointing, the hard work at practices had proven to be very rewarding.

As five of the Hawks play their best on the court, coaches Ron Lassiter (far left) and David MacArthur concentrate on the game.

Kneeling from left to right — B-team: Jimmy McCants, Scott Meegan, Todd Fennell, Eric Bennett, Heath Jones, Mark Counts, Michael Ritter, Brian Thomas, Kevin Beach, Matt Free. Standing from left to right: B-team coach Brett Maddox; Junior Varsity Boys team: Mike Hiott, Chad Brightwell, Bud Williams, Donald Martin, Billy Ray Herndon, Assistant coach David MacArthur, and Head coach Ron Lassiter. Not pictured: Thomas Rowe and Gene Simmons.