

The Baby Blues

For the second consecutive year, the junior varsity baseball team had an unusual season. Head-coached by Robert Axson, and assistant-coached by Chuck Bishop, the team consisted of a little under fifteen players. Many of those players were also members of the varsity baseball team; therefore, they had to complete double of the usual workload. With many of the boys participating on both of the teams, it was difficult to schedule games for the "Baby Blues." The team only played five games, but it ended its season with a 2-2-1 record, with which they were satisfied and proud.

During the awards banquet, the players were recognized by coaches Robert Axson and Chuck Bishop. Scott Pellum was honored by the two coaches and his teammates when the most valuable player award was presented to him.

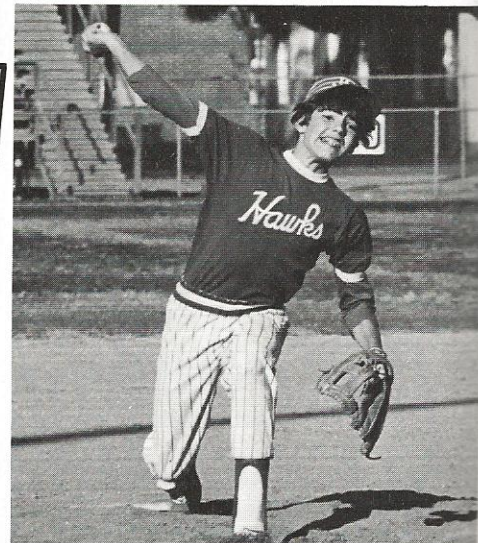

As freshman Brian Strickland awaits the decision of the umpire, seventh-grader Jimmy McCants steps up for his turn at bat.
