

It Was Worth It!

"I know that teacher hates me!", "How could she give us all that homework!", "We can't have three tests in one day!", "An F! How could I have made an F!" How impossible the school year seemed. All that work and time spent on studying for the "killer" test.

Study this, write that, read this book, write that term paper; preparing for college and the future was a hard and drawn out task. But in between the homework and school projects there was always a time for fun and a time to relax.

Class parties and club activities helped the students enjoy the time spent at school and forget the frustrations of work. Soon, time began to fly by. Before they knew it, it was an end to another school year. After all those days of begging for summer they actually felt a touch of sadness when cleaning out their lockers. It was over; all the hard work and early mornings. It was more than just learning about books; it was learning about life and ... It Was Worth It!

Library assistant, Dee Ann Simmons, takes time to help Michael Warren find the perfect book for his report.
